

South Carolina Community Conversations on Immigration June 22-23, 2017

Ali Noorani, Executive Director of the National Immigration Forum, is coming to South Carolina June 22-23 for a series of conversations to talk about the national state of affairs with immigration, the challenges we face, and the hopeful opportunities that are arising in communities across our country.

His new book, There Goes the Neighborhood, explores how people across the Heartland of America are learning to welcome and value immigrants. He spent time in South Carolina researching the book and devotes a full chapter to the state declaring that as goes South Carolina, there goes the country when it comes to the national mood on immigration.

You are invited to join him in one of three venues to participate in this discussion!
